Headline:
Dry with clear spells at first and chilly for some.

This Evening and Tonight:
Dry with clear spells at first tonight with temperatures quickly falling away and turning chilly in many rural spots. It will turn cloudier late in the night, but should stay largely dry, with temperatures recovering a little by dawn. Minimum temperature 2 deg C (36 deg F).

Saturday:
Rather cloudy through Saturday morning, with perhaps the odd spot of rain and drizzle over Cumbria and North Lancashire. Dry for most further south with a few bright spells. Maximum temperature 16 deg C (61 deg F).

Outlook for Sunday to Tuesday:
Largely fine Sunday, though more chance of cloud and spells of rain in the north and west. Turning unsettled and breezier into week and remaining mild by day and night.
